Colorado's labor market is evolving faster than ever. Students and job seekers are engaging in learning experiences to help them develop advanced and adaptable skill sets that are necessary to compete in the complex global marketplace.

While not a new strategy, work-based learning is one way education and training systems are partnering with business to ensure that students have the skills and career exposure needed to build pathways to meaningful careers.

Launching October 2017, the Colorado Department of Education is collaborating with the Colorado Workforce Development Council, Colorado Department of Higher Education, Colorado Community College System and the Colorado Department of Labor and Employment to host a Work-based Incubator.

WHO: Teams of school and district leaders interested in implementing or deepening work-based learning programming.

WHAT: A series of webinars and meetings designed to empower interested districts and schools to create and deepen high quality work-based learning programs.

WHEN: Year-long experience launching fall of 2017
